Dunn County Board of Supervisors-Mike Kneer

Dunn County Land and Water Conservation-Lindsay Olson

- LWCD staff are working on summarizing successes of their 2018 work plans and setting new goals and work plans for 2019.
- Plan to invite the advisors of our Land & Water Resource Management Plan development committee to come in for an open house to review our progress on the plan in the next few months. This is a 10-year plan in effect from 2017-2026.
- I'm working on some BMP tracking and data management in GIS to streamline things going forward.
- A new farmer-led watershed has been established and funded by DATCP. They will start meeting monthly in January. This group was granted $40,000 to fund cover crops, soil sampling for nutrient management, groundwater testing, and will also include some test plots with education and outreach components for both farming and non-farming community members.
- I'm working with UW-Stout spring capstone students. Innisfree McKinnon has some students who may be interested in running the EVAAL GIS tool, and I suggested doing this analysis on the watersheds of the new farmer-led watershed, Red Cedar Conservation Farmers. I will know more once the semester starts back up.
- Chris Gaetzke, a conservation planner on our staff, has resigned and is taking on a new role as the executive director of the Lower Chippewa Invasives Partnership. We will continue to work with him in his new capacity as it relates to county activities. His last day was January 3.
- We are putting together a committee to address groundwater concerns across the county. This ad-hoc group will meet monthly for six months, with meetings to be publicly posted. The first meeting has not yet been scheduled, but will occur later this month. I will be the lead on the committee's work, with our public health director, KT Gallagher, serving as the meeting facilitator. Other committee members include a well driller, a well owner, a dairy farmer, two county supervisors, and three county staff persons.

Civic Organizing Principles:

Human Capacity (to govern for the common good)

- Every individual is a policy maker and has the capacity to know what is good, to grow in that knowledge, to govern for the common good, and to be a co-producer of justice in the world. Civic Leaders are obligated to organize the civic infrastructure to achieve this outcome.

Democracy (A system of governance that requires citizens to govern for the common good)

- Rule by “the people” is the best system of human governance. All stakeholders organize a civic infrastructure to govern for the common good and produce justice in the tension between individual and diverse interests.

Active Citizenship (Civic Leadership) (Role that obligates all stakeholders to govern for the common good)

- An active citizen is a governing member. In a democracy, citizens are obligated to govern for the good of the whole. In return for their contributions, citizens share in the rewards of a just society. Civic Leaders are obligated to organize the infrastructure needed for individuals to be active citizens in institutions of family, faith, community, work, learning and governance.

Political Competence (mindset and skill needed to carry out obligation of active citizenship)

- Politics is the “work of the citizen”. All citizens are responsible to develop the political competence to define problems, produce solutions, and establish policies in light of civic principles and standards while achieving their particular goals. This mindset and the civic skills needed to carry out the role of active citizenship is dependent upon civic leaders who organize the capacity for key stakeholders in their jurisdiction to carry out the obligation of active citizenship.

Institutional Efficacy (Societal structure needed to sustain democracy and develop active citizenship)

- In a democracy, institutions of family, faith, work, community, learning, and governance sustain the democratic values of our society and ensure the capacity to govern for the common good. Civic leaders and active citizens know they are obligated to produce the civic institutions and infrastructure necessary to sustain democracy as a just system of governance.

Civic Organizing Standards:

- All those impacted by the problem are stakeholders and help define the problem in light of civic principles and the realities of their situation.
- All stakeholders are accountable for contributing resources (leadership/time, knowledge, constituencies & dollars) to solve the problem.
- All stakeholders are engaged in decision-making and policy-making that contributes to the common good.
- All stakeholders implement policies grounded in civic principles in the places where they have the authority to act.

Civic Organizing Skills:

- Critical thinking: Distinguishing objective reality (facts) from subjective reality (interpretative) as both relate to achieving our principles and common goals.
- Open-ended questions to engage different perspectives.
- Strategic listening to determine and clarify self-interest as it relates to common goals.
- Suspending judgment to understand divergent points of view.
- Ability to negotiate and compromise while staying accountable to civic principles.
- Fostering constructive tension to work through values that are each good in their own right but often conflict (e.g. freedom and equality).
- Holding self and others accountable for following through on agreement
